Industry Certified Specialists in International Real Estate Market
The Harrison Team are Local Experts in Luxury Property Investments

San Francisco, CA – February 26, 2007 – In the travel industry everyone is a specialist in some domestic or international location. But did you know there are also certified destination experts in the real estate business? The Harrison Team duo are industry credentialed specialists in the worldwide real estate market. They are also the local experts at Pacific Union GMAC Real Estate in global luxury real estate and investment properties throughout the world.

A top producing duo, Linda Harrison and Ellen Anderson are The Harrison Team. Passionate about their work and committed to delivering the finest service and quality experience to every client, Harrison and Anderson spent a week in Paris earning their Certified International Property Specialist (CIPS) designation, specializing in international real estate. Now they are able to offer all clients the same market expertise for buying and selling properties in Europe, Asia/Pacific, the Americas, Middle East and Africa as they do right here at home.

“By earning this industry credential, we strengthened our knowledge, skills and abilities to serve as a trusted advisor for clients in the unique aspects of international real estate,” said Harrison, who founded the team and recently was promoted to Vice President and Branch Manager at Pacific Union’s Civic Center Office. “We also gained a valuable network of resources throughout the world we can refer our clients to in order to make their travels, relocation, renovation or property management as smooth as possible.”

To earn the CIPS credential, participants are required to attend classes and complete a week of rigorous coursework covering the real estate markets of Europe, Asia/Pacific, the Americas, Middle East/Africa and in-depth financial analysis. The CIPS educational program is offered through the National Association of REALTORS® (NAR) international network to REALTOR® members who are focusing on the foreign real estate market. Those who earn CIPS certification become part of a powerful specialty network of global real estate professionals who service the growing international market in their local communities by focusing on culture, exchange rates, investment trends and legal issues.

In addition to the CIPS designation, Anderson is a certified Seniors Real Estate Specialist (SRES), another industry-recognized distinction she accomplished to best serve this specific niche market. She also completed the mastery of negotiations program at the University of San Francisco.
